REV. BILLY SUNDAY'S TABERNACLE IS ALL READY AT PORTSMOUTH.

MANCHURIAN U. S. VICE COUNSEL BADLY BEATEN BY NATIVES

Washington, Dec. 29.—Officials here fear the reported attack by natives upon United States Vice Counsel Wilson at Daren, Manchuria, may be the forerunner of more serious demonstrations. The state department says it has no official report of the affair, but readily admits that if the report is true the United States must demand a rigid investigation of the affair and punishment of the offenders.

The reports received by newspapers say Williamson was ordered from the market place by a Jap and two Chinese. He refused to go, and the natives gave him a fearful beating with sticks.

JUDGE WEYGANDT WILL PRESIDE AT M'KINLEY TRIAL

Judge W. E. Weygandt of Wooster, will preside at the trial of William McKinley on the charge of murder in the first degree, which will begin in common please court here on Tuesday, Jan. 17.

This matter was decided upon at an important meeting of the judges of this, the Sixth judicial circuit, which was called by Judge E. M. Wickham and held Wednesday at the Neil House in Columbus.

This district is composed of the counties of Licking, Coshocton, Wayne, Morrow, Knox, Richland, Ashland, Holmes and Delaware, and six judges take care of the legal business coming before the county courts. These judges are Mansfield of Richland, Wickham of Delaware, Seward of Licking, Dever of Ashland, Weygandt of Wayne and Nicholas of Coshocton counties.

This meeting was called for the purpose of selecting a judge to preside at this important trial.

The information that another jurist than Judge Mansfield would preside at the McKinley trial was substantiated by Judge E. M. Wickham by long distance telephone to the Advocate this afternoon.

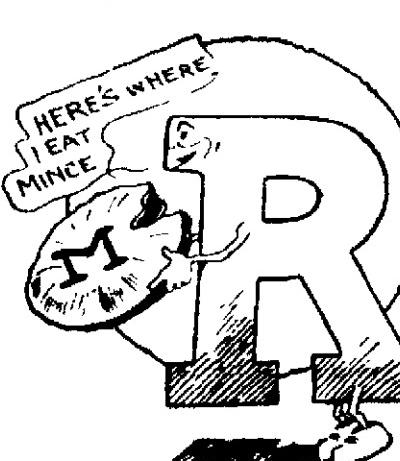

Judge Weygandt has never been here in his official capacity before, but many members of the local bar are well acquainted with him, and say that he is an able lawyer and a fair and impartial judge, whose decisions are quoted in high regard.

Judge Wickham will be in Newark Monday, Jan. 9, to open court, charge the January grand jury and assign cases for trial. There will be two common pleas courts sitting here during the term. Judge Seward opens his court for the trial of civil cases Monday, Jan. 16, and Judge Weygandt his for the trial of criminal cases on Tuesday, Jan. 17.

WATHA MAY COME BACK TO TESTIFY

There is a report current that Monisha Watha, the Haxian, who was recently convicted of mail-stealing in connection with the kidnapping of Carl Einerson, and who was sentenced by Judge Mansfield to twenty years imprisonment in the Ohio penitentiary, desires to testify in Newark and give information that was not brought out at her trial. What this information is, or how she obtained it, is not known.

Bratten, Franklin, Greene, Monroe, Oliver and Scott townships. Only five persons to date have pleaded not guilty. The indicted ones are coming in at a rate of 70 per diem and are receiving sentence.

More than 50 men who accepted bribes have appeared in court without being indicted and entered pleas of guilty through that channel.

Judge Blair is getting names of many prominent politicians who will have to face the music.

The penalties imposed by the court varied more than ever before. Judge Blair is making a distinction between the poor and the rich, and in some instances it is impossible to learn just what extent offenders were punished, court officers refusing to assert.

Judge Blair impressed upon every one present in court the fact that he was being lenient with them because they had come in and confessed and did not wait for the sheriff to go out and serve them.

He said he proposed to allow only a few days more for those who had received money at the last election to come and confess. Those who failed to do so will be brought in by the sheriff and officers' costs will be added.

Their fines made larger and in some instances workhouse penalties will be enforced. The judge said every one who had received money at the last election knew the fact that it was not necessary to wait until an indictment was returned to come in and confess. Many voters are coming in from all parts of the county and stating their facts to the judge, entering their pleas and paying their fines.

Another instance: Among the voters who confessed they had tainted their citizenship were men who had voted for Lincoln and boys who cast their first ballots for Harding and Harmon.

One farmer in Jacksonville, Preble, confessed that on a recent election day he had thrice bartered his vote away, each sale to a different interest.

In Manchester, a manufacturing town, the shops are closed, and home hoards of cash are depleted after the season of gift giving and holiday extravagance. It is a problem with many where to raise the $12—$7 fine and $7 costs—which the majority are their workhouse sentence are remitted.

The record of chattel mortgages filed in the court house shows that many of those who have confessed were bartering their mortgaged their household goods to raise money to pay their fines. In one place the family cow was so placed in pawn to procure liberty.

In the confession of the Jackson precinct farmer, who came in Meigs township, the jury was startled to learn that he got $12 for voting the straight Republican $10 for voting the straight Democratic ticket and $3 for voting for a particular candidate. He pleaded guilty when arraigned and received the usual $7 and costs, six months workhouse sentence and five years disfranchisement, with the prison sentence suspended.

Reform of the criminal code so that a man who offers his vote for sale can be punished equally with the man who gets his price is advocated by Judge Blair in connection with the Adams county scandal.

Judge Blair has been forced to prosecute many men who tried to put their votes at auction in the bootleg investigation.

The man who tries to sell is as guilty morally as the man who succeeds, said the Judge. Under the law there is no remedy for this. I have had to free men who should have been convicted.

A few years ago a bill providing for such a change in the law was before the legislature and I spoke in favor of it. But it was killed. I hope that this investigation here will stir up enough public sentiment to have a law of that nature put on Ohio's statute books.

There is now every indication that the number of indictments will reach

Request Date Set for Jan. 3.

MANY CLAIMS ARE MADE

By Senatorial Aspirants But Joint Legislative Meeting Will Settle Matter.

Columbus, Dec. 29.—Atlee Pomerene and Edward Hanley today agreed to ask that a Democratic caucus be held Friday, January 6. Negotiations were carried on by the campaign managers. They will ask all other senatorial candidates to join in the request. It is understood that Pomerene will ask for a public caucus and ballot and Hanley is said to favor public ballot but a secret caucus.

Columbus, Dec. 29.—After a caucus in the headquarters of Lieutenant Governor-elect Atlee Pomerene last night it was announced that a formal demand would be made upon the proper authorities for the summoning of a joint senatorial Democratic caucus for next Tuesday night, January 3, in the hall of the House of Representatives. Coupled with the demand is a solemn request that the caucus be open to all, and that the voting for a candidate for Senator be by roll call instead of by secret ballot.

Speaker-elect Samuel J. Vining was then waited upon, and preparations were made to get into communication with President Pro Tem-elect William Green of Coshocton, with a view of having them start the machinery into motion for the issuing of a call.

There are now two caucuses Chairman Senator Thomas A. Dean for the upper branch and Representative Robert Billingslea for the lower branch.

It was believed last night that Messrs. Dean and Billingslea were the proper persons to issue a joint call for the joint caucus, and not the speaker and president pro tem of the senate and president pro tem of the house. Mr. Vining, when asked regarding it, said he was not sure of his ground, but if he and Mr. Dean were requested to act as umpires quick action would be had. Senator Green will be asked to come here and act with Mr. Vining in the matter.

This decision of the Pomerene group indicates that an effort is to be made to force the issue quickly.

Mr. Whitacre laid claim to 56 pledged votes for his candidate, or 11 more than the number requisite for a nomination. With great promptness Congressman James M. Cox said that this claim was not founded upon facts, and that the final ballot would show that State Chairman E. W. Hanley would be the winner.

The general understanding was that the date favored by the Hanley supporters was January 5. As for the procedure the statement of Congressman Cox is entirely correct. It is a matter for the Democratic members of the House and Senate and not the senatorial candidates to determine.

WE DROPS ONE TRADITION

New Members Refuse to Remain Silent in Senate.

"WAR SCARE" IS REPUDIATED

Taft's Speech Causes Those Charged With Responsibility to Rush for Cover, and It Looks as if a Discharged War Department Messenger Boy Must Shoulder the Blame.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN

W. SAWYER, JR., 29, a Socialist Congressman, who was silent during the recent "war scare," was one of the new senators seated in the Senate yesterday. He and his colleagues did nothing for more than one session.

When four new senators were admitted to one title it was impossible for the new senators to remain silent with so many demands upon them. That started the tradition. Then other new senators followed. They had messages to deliver and spoke their minds. That the tradition has been entirely broken was shown in the short session of the senate before the holidays.

Four new senators were sworn in and three took part in the proceedings before the recess. Swanson of Virginia reported a bill which was passed. Young of Iowa made a speech of considerable note, and Thornton of Louisiana debated on Bemis in the omnibus claims bill relating to his state which had been attacked. Altogether the new senators made a creditable showing.

Who Will "Hold the Bag?"

Nearly every man who was in any way charged with responsibility for the recent "war scare" has been "getting out from under." President Taft discredited those who have been talking war in a public speech, and then there was a "great rush to cover" of all rooflines.

Secretary Meyer went before the naval committee and urged two battleships as the regular naval increase, and as he came away he nonchalantly remarked to a group of newspaper men that he did not expect to see another war.

Then Secretary Dickinson withdrew from the house his "scare" report and the information was allowed to filter out that the secretary had simply transmitted a report which had been prepared by the general staff. Then General Wood, chief of staff, found occasion to discredit the war scare in a public speech, and so the general staff is out of it. The first we know it will be found that a clerk or messenger was the culprit.

Here's Possible Proof.

In the Congressional Record there is an indication that the guilty person has been traced. It was discovered that an employee had been dispensed with in the war department.

"I want to inquire," said Congressman Mann during the consideration of an appropriation bill, "whether it was on account of economy or otherwise that they have dropped a messenger boy."

"The war department," explained Congressman Gillett, who had charge of the bill, suggested that they could dispense with his services, and he was dropped."

There was more or less talk about this saving in a bill full of increases, and finally Mann concluded, "The messenger boy, so far as I can see, seems to be a total loss."

And now perhaps the blame for the "war scare" will be placed on the lost messenger boy. Why shouldn't he be made to "hold the bag" in an emergency like this?

Cullom's Ambition.

Senator Cullom before he passed from public life wants to see underway the election of a monument or memorial to Lincoln which will be worthy of the war president. "I want it to be grand, but simple in its grandeur," said the Illinois senator. "In the capital there should be the most interesting monument to our greatest man."

I knew Lincoln very well when I was ten years old. When I wanted to study law my father sent me to Lincoln, and he was away from home so much. He was very good to me. Why, when he comes to Washington to be inaugurated he was on my note for $200. When I wanted money I would get him to endorse my note and go to the bank for the cash."

The senator told this to show his close relationship with Lincoln. He is the only man in public life who was so intimate with Lincoln.

Amazed Senate Employees.

Before the holiday recess the employees of the senate received a shock. A man with his trousers tucked into his boots, on his head a big cowboy hat, which was not removed, with a swagging gait marched past all the doorkeepers and entered the senate corridor. A section of it is reserved for senators and only in privileged persons.

"The employees did not stop him," remarked Congressman Menden of Illinois, "because they thought he was one of the new western senators."

Those employees were very much chagrined afterward to learn that the man was only a Washington truck driver who had boldly entered the sacred precincts of the senate.

TRY A LAXATIVE.

COUGH SYRUP.

Make It Yourself.

If you have been going up winter with a troublesome coughing cough, without taking relief of course, take a number of old time cups of tea with a few drops of essence of peppermint, then you should try making at home a certain syrup that has a laxative, cleansing and tonic action.

Essence of peppermint when made into a syrup acts as a purgative and cures the most various complaints and colds on the lungs of old and young, and not only in old but also in the feeblest constitution.

Now, so that everyone can make it, here is a word or two. Buy of your druggist 2 1/2 oz. jar of essence of peppermint, containing 100 drops, for making a pint of laxative cough syrup very easily at home.

You make a syrup of granulated sugar. Here is the formula:

Essence of peppermint..... 2 1/2 oz.

Granulated sugar syrup.....

It makes the syrup enough

strongly known for old people and children like it so well, too.

It not only quickly loosens the tightest cough, but it drives the cold out of the system and cures by its tonic and laxative action.

You can save $3 to $4 by making it at home cheaply, as a pint lasts a family a long time.

Nevertheless the next afternoon there was a big crowd on the oval to

A Story of the Football Gridiron

By FRED L. YOUNG

Contributor to American Press Association

witness Vernon's defeat. Captain Muir was walking across the gridiron with his head hanging in despondency when a man stepped up to him and said: "I'd like to be in this game."

"Do you know football?"

"Yes."

"You're big and strong enough apparently to do good work. It's pretty late, but I think I can take you on—that is, if you're really in college. I never saw you before, and I can't accept you without proof that you're in college and not a professional."

"Go ask the registrar. He's over there in the west stand."

Muir did as was suggested, came back satisfied and accepted the newcomer, placing him in the position of right tackle.

This happened not ten minutes before the teams lined up. When the game began there were not a dozen persons on the ground that knew the Vernon team had had an success on. A man appeared in their line half a head above most of his fellows whom no one recognized. He attracted little attention, however, for every one knew that business is not the only faculty necessary to a great football player. Those most intimate with the personnel of the team noticed him as he took his position in the line and wondered where he had come from. Not one of them knew him. A member of the senior class said that his face was familiar to him, but he couldn't place him. Some felt a suspicion that he was a semiprofessional who had been shod through the exams for some special course for this special occasion. But even if there had been time for this supposition to take root the unimpeachable character of Captain Muir would have prevented.

The game commenced with the bursting of two wedges. The newcomer was seen in the center of the Vernon wedge apparently dragging half a dozen men with him as he advanced at a snail's pace. Then when the game became more open every one was surprised at the elasticity of his great body and his remarkable quickness.

The end of the first half is an interval of importance in football. Up to that point the game is developing. The comparative ability of the teams and of the individual players is being noted. No great interchange of views among those present is taking place. Every one is intent on the game, looking especially for scores. But the moment the half is ended there is a hubbub as to what has taken place. One team or the other is marked for the better one. Some one player has shown especial ability as a tackler, a passer of the ball or a runner. One of whom great things was expected has failed lamentably. In this Vernon-Kendall match when the teams had lined up for the kick off a few bets were being made of 5 to 1 on Kendall. When they broke their formations, though Kendall had scored once and Vernon not at all, Vernon backers offered even money on their team. There being no takers, odds were given.

This change of feeling had been brought about mainly by the big man who had come into the game at the last moment. Twice by his own effort he had got the ball within six yards of goal, but for want of support had lost the ground he had gained. Once he had by a quick move got on the enemy's right and could have carried it to goal but for the same reason—the failure of his team to assist him. And now no one knew what he might succeed in doing unaided in the second half. Bettors are timid, and many begin to hedge.

As soon as the second half opened this change in sentiment became a revolution. The new man entered the field as if the fate of Vernon depended on him. He had been seen during the interval to speak to one of the most popular young ladies belonging to the college coteries. She had smiled upon him and when he had left her he had walked back on to the gridiron with a determination in his face and in his very gait that brooked no good to the Kendall team. And now that the game had recommenced—more open than before—his great frame was seen dashing about like a featherweight. Within ten minutes he had run through a succession of tacklers, dodging and ducking, finally carrying the ball to a touchdown. Later while on the extreme right the ball was passed to him, and he made one of those famous runs with it to goal that never fail to electrify spectators. His last feat was to carry half a dozen men who were clinging to him and the ball as well as for five yards and plant it over the line.

The half ended with this feat, while Vernon roared wild with shouting. Their college had won and had won through the personal effort of one man.

The moment the game was ended he left the field.

The next morning in chapel the president made the following announcement:

"Three years ago a great injustice was done a student of this university, Elmer Ward, a member of the present senior class, after being in college but a few months, was expelled for entering a store and taking away supplies. Recently a man who much resembled Ward has been convicted of another offense and confessed that Ward had been mistaken for him. The party that entered the store were not students, as was supposed. Mr. Ward, who has continued his studies with tutors, has been again received among us and will henceforth be considered a member of his class."

Then it was known that Ward and the football hero were the same person. It was also soon known that he was the betrothed of Miss Trevor and that she had inspired him to gain a victory for his alma mater.

"Yes."

"You're big and strong enough apparently to do good work. It's pretty late, but I think I can take you on—that is, if you're really in college. I never saw you before, and I can't accept you without proof that you're in college and not a professional."

"Go ask the registrar. He's over there in the west stand."

Muir did as was suggested, came back satisfied and accepted the newcomer, placing him in the position of right tackle.

This happened not ten minutes before the teams lined up. When the game began there were not a dozen persons on the ground that knew the Vernon team had had an success on. A man appeared in their line half a head above most of his fellows whom no one recognized. He attracted little attention, however, for every one knew that business is not the only faculty necessary to a great football player. Those most intimate with the personnel of the team noticed him as he took his position in the line and wondered where he had come from. Not one of them knew him. A member of the senior class said that his face was familiar to him, but he couldn't place him. Some felt a suspicion that he was a semiprofessional who had been shod through the exams for some special course for this special occasion. But even if there had been time for this supposition to take root the unimpeachable character of Captain Muir would have prevented.

The game commenced with the bursting of two wedges. The newcomer was seen in the center of the Vernon wedge apparently dragging half a dozen men with him as he advanced at a snail's pace. Then when the game became more open every one was surprised at the elasticity of his great body and his remarkable quickness.

The end of the first half is an interval of importance in football. Up to that point the game is developing. The comparative ability of the teams and of the individual players is being noted. No great interchange of views among those present is taking place. Every one is intent on the game, looking especially for scores. But the moment the half is ended there is a hubbub as to what has taken place. One team or the other is marked for the better one. Some one player has shown especial ability as a tackler, a passer of the ball or a runner. One of whom great things was expected has failed lamentably. In this Vernon-Kendall match when the teams had lined up for the kick off a few bets were being made of 5 to 1 on Kendall. When they broke their formations, though Kendall had scored once and Vernon not at all, Vernon backers offered even money on their team. There being no takers, odds were given.

This change of feeling had been brought about mainly by the big man who had come into the game at the last moment. Twice by his own effort he had got the ball within six yards of goal, but for want of support had lost the ground he had gained. Once he had by a quick move got on the enemy's right and could have carried it to goal but for the same reason—the failure of his team to assist him. And now no one knew what he might succeed in doing unaided in the second half. Bettors are timid, and many begin to hedge.

The half ended with this feat, while Vernon roared wild with shouting. Their college had won and had won through the personal effort of one man.

The moment the game was ended he left the field.

The next morning in chapel the president made the following announcement:

"Three years ago a great injustice was done a student of this university, Elmer Ward, a member of the present senior class, after being in college but a few months, was expelled for entering a store and taking away supplies. Recently a man who much resembled Ward has been convicted of another offense and confessed that Ward had been mistaken for him. The party that entered the store were not students, as was supposed. Mr. Ward, who has continued his studies with tutors, has been again received among us and will henceforth be considered a member of his class."

Then it was known that Ward and the football hero were the same person. It was also soon known that he was the betrothed of Miss Trevor and that she had inspired him to gain a victory for his alma mater.

"Yes."

"You're big and strong enough apparently to do good work. It's pretty late, but I think I can take you on—that is, if you're really in college. I never saw you before, and I can't accept you without proof that you're in college and not a professional."

"Go ask the registrar. He's over there in the west stand."

OLD FASHIONED DANCE OCCURS AT GRANVILLE

Mrs. Kerr Entertains Friends at Hotel Buxton—K. of P. Lodge to Have Banquet.

Granville, Dec. 29.—While Granville has not been lacking in social diversions during the past season, none has been given that has afforded more real enjoyment than the party given by Mrs. Kerr at the Hotel Buxton on Tuesday evening of this week. Mrs. Kerr had sent out invitations to those of her friends in Granville and out-of-town who sometimes indulged in tripping the light fantastic toe, and it is needless to say that there were but few regrets. The evening was passed in having a good social time, dancing being the principal diversion. It was one of the old fashioned and old-time dances. Riley Patterson, the fiddler from way back furnished "ye olden tyme" music, while the callers gave out calls that have not been heard in this part of the country for fifty years. The dancing continued until a late hour. During the evening a sumptuous supper was served. The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Cary Ferguson, Roy Ferguson, and the Misses Sampson, Amy Jones, Philbrook and Black of Columbus; Mrs. Cramer of Steubenville; Mrs. Paige of Johnstown; Mrs. Jessie Elliott of Newark and Mr. and Mrs. James Upham of Newark.

A meeting of Altamaha Lodge, No. 296, Knights of Pythias, of this place, was held on Wednesday night. There was an unusually good attendance of the members, notwithstanding the fact that there was no work to be transacted. At the next regular meeting of the lodge to be held on Wednesday night of next week, it is hoped that every member that can possibly do so, will make an effort to be present, as the recently elected officers are to be installed. In addition to this, other business of importance is to be transacted. Following the work a banquet will be served and a social time enjoyed.

Mrs. Mary E. White of Newark, has been here for some days, visiting her daughter, Mrs. F. L. Ferguson.

At a special meeting of Center Star Lodge, No. 11, F. and A. M., of this place, held on Tuesday evening, there was a splendid attendance of the members, while a number of visitors were also present. Considerable business was transacted among which was the conferring of the Fellow Craft degree on two candidates.

The old Raccoon creek was booming Thursday morning. The rains of Wednesday and Wednesday night had the effect of causing large quantities of water to pour down from the hills and the result was that at an early hour Thursday morning the stream was nearly bank full. Should the rain continue much longer the water will be out of its banks and the low lands will be flooded.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Carlisle, who have been visiting relatives and friends here and in the vicinity during the past ten days, returned home Thursday, after having had a most enjoyable visit. Mr. and Mrs. Carlisle formerly resided a short distance northwest of town and have many friends in this vicinity who were glad to see them once more.

The Skylark

And His Spurs

WILL JONES

The Birds and Their Nest

"time," said daddy, "there was a skylark which was very spiteful of his beautiful voice. The cause of his unhappiness was the ugly, long, sharp spurs which he had on his feet. He felt sure that they would keep any pretty little lady lark from a husband."

Time, however, it turned out that he was wrong. There was one little skylark which lived near the bird with long spurs and which had much of his beautiful voice that she did not care about the ugly spurs on his feet. So she married him, and they went to live together near a little nest which they built in the grass. Larks fly high in the air, and they have their nests on the ground.

"After awhile there were three pretty little white eggs spotted with brown at the skylarks' nest, and they were very happy thinking how nice it would be when the three eggs should hatch out. They were so happy that they forgot all about the ugly, long spurs."

"But one day a sad thing happened. The little birds heard the farmer say that on the next day he would cut the grass in the field. That would mean that his scythe would pass near or over the nest with the three little eggs, and they would be broken by either the scythe or the heavy boots of the farmer or one of his men."

"What shall we do?" said the poor little lady skylark. "The eggs will be broken, and we shall have no pretty little baby skylarks to make us happy. Oh, if I had only laid the eggs on the other side of the hedge, where there is long grass which the farmer never cuts!"

"That gave the husband skylark an idea. Suppose the eggs were on the other side of the hedge, do you think they would be safer there than they are in this place?"

"Oh, yes," said his mate.

"Well," he answered, "I think I know a good way to get them there."

"With that he looked down at the long spurs which he had thought so ugly and useless. Then he hopped over to the eggs, and, laying one foot over one of the eggs, he clasped it with the spur. 'Why, it fits exactly,' he said.

"Do you think you could lift it, fly with it to the other side of the hedge and then lay it down very carefully there?" asked his mate, who was greatly worried.

"Indeed I could, my dear," he replied. And that is just exactly what he did with the three eggs."
